

TREAT HIERARCHY

It's important to understand your dog's hierarchy of treats so that you know which foods are most important to them and when to use these foods when working with your dogs. Using high valued food all the time will make those foods less special.

NOTE: Different dogs will place different foods at a higher value based on their tastes. This is why you should try different things before you choose which foods to use for what. As a general rule, the more difficult the task is for a dog, the higher up you go on the hierarchy. If you are asking your dog to do something you know they perceive as uncomfortable or stressful, use the highest level.
